3rd Battle of Ypres - 1st Passchendaele: 105 Brigade attacked with the 16th Cheshires and the 14th Gloucestershires; the 15th Sherwood Forresters were in support with the 15th Cheshires in reserve. The right of the 16th Cheshires went well and gained its objective, Marechal Farm, with few problems. However, the centre and left were help up by fire from a blockhouse in the wood, 500 yards north-west of Colombo House. The line was consolidated at this point. At 4:39pm the Germans launched a counter-attack against the left of the 16th Cheshires and broke through. The surviving Cheshires fell back 100 yards, and then back to their original line. 16th Cheshires lost 9 officers and 327 men during the day long struggle to take pill-boxes and repulse counter-attacks.

Battle of the Somme; Second Battle Of Ypres, Battle of Albert. 1-13 Jul 1916, including the capture of Montauban, Mametz, Fricourt, Contalmaison and La Boisselle. The 1st Battalion fought at Le Chateau and shared in the battle of Maine and advance to the Aisne. It was involved in the capture of Armentieres and in the second battle of Ypres 1915, where it suffered two of the earliest gas attacks in the war. The Battalion took part in the battle of the Somme 1916 and the battle of Arras 1917. Also in 1917 the Battalion became part of the 36th Ulster Division, fighting with distinction in the battle of Cambrai. As a result of the German offensive in March 1918, the Battalion suffered heavily and was reformed into one company attached for a time to the 9th Battalion. When it was restored to strength, it took part in the third battle of Ypres 1918. Private Robert Morrow

3rd Battle of Ypres - 1st Passchendaele

The combined strength of the Indian Corps was little more than a British Infantry Division. Thus, in the action of Festubert which opened on November 21, not only was the Indian Corps very weak, considering the strength of the attack now made upon it, but when this attack actually developed, on the nights of November 22 - 23 and 23 - 24, the relief of the Meerut Division by the Lahore Division was in progress. On the 23rd the right centre of the Indian Corps was heavily attacked by the German 29th Division, and three of the defending battalions were driven from their trenches, which for a length of 800 yards, were occupied by the enemy.

In the meantime the two other squadrons of the regiment - C and D under Captain Grimshaw, who had with him Captain Alderson and Lieutenant de Pass - had also moved up to Festubert, and the following extracts from Captain Grimshaw's diary tell the story of their experiences:

24th: At dusk I sent for Alderson with C squadron and he arrived about 8 pm and his men were a welcome support. He also brought some blankets, braziers, and charcoal, also rations, so we were a little less uncomfortable; while in reply to my request they sent me up a lot of bombs and a sack full of gun-cotton slabs and fuses.

Memorial: Thiepval Memorial, Pier and Face 10 B 11 B and 12 B, Somme, France

Battle of the Somme; Battle Of Albert, 1-13 July 1916, The Tyneside Irish supported the attack, setting out from the Tara-Usna line and advanced, in the straight lines prescribed, down the gentle slope of the open hillside and across the valley floor, losing men all the way. On the left, before the village they were stopped like all the rest, but they managed to adhere to the plan and passed through the few successful remnants of the initial wave to press on into the German lines. Three thousand men had set off, but by the end of the day the Tyneside Irish had been reduced to less than fifty men still capable of fighting. (OTT p139-140); The 21st and 22nd Northumberland Fusiliers (102 Brigade) and 26th Northumberland Fusiliers (103 Brigade) tried to pass south of La Boiselle and north of Lochnagar. They started the moment the mine was fired, crossing no man's land and reaching the trench of the Schwaben Hohe, they continued down the west side of Sausage Valley and crossed both Kaufmanngraben and Alte Jugerstrasse. Bombers were sent out to La Boiselle but could not make progress. Machine-gun fire from La Boiselle started to cause heavy casualties, but Quergraben III was reached in places and a few men were reported in Bailiff Wood. A German counter-attack forced the defenders back to Kaufmanngraben where they consolidated. (The Somme p25)

The Battle of St Quentin: Exceptionally heavy German shellfire hit all areas of British front occupied by Fifth Army, most of the front of Third Army, and some of the front of First Army, at 4.40am. It was concentrated on British artillery and machine-gun positions, headquarters, telephone exchanges, railways and other important centres of communications. German infantry began to attack at 9.40am. New tactics mean that infantry continue to probe forward through gaps while follow-up units besiege and engage British posts and defended villages. Many of these only fell once entirely surrounded, outflanked and hopeless.

This peacetime Division of the army was quartered in Ireland and England at the outbreak of war, and was ordered to concentrate near Cambridge. By early September it was fully equipped and trained. On the 10 September 1914, it landed at St Nazaire and proceeded to the Western Front, where it remained throughout the war. The Division arrived in time to reinforce the hard-pressed BEF on the Aisne, before the whole army was moved north into Flanders. By 15th October the last troops left the Aisne, and joined those who had moved earlier, in Flanders.

First Battle of Ypres, 30th October 1914: Positions near Bas Maisnil - held trenches in front of La Boutillerie. Enemy broke through between C & D Companies. B Company made a successful counterattack. B Company almost ceased to exist - 16 killed & 29 wounded.

Westvleteren is a village and commune in the Province of West Flanders, near the French frontier. Dozinghem Military Cemetery is south of the village, and 8 km from Poperinghe. Westvleteren was outside the front held by British troops in Belgium during the war, and the Cemetery is its one historical link with the British forces. In July 1917, at the beginning of the British offensive of Third Ypres, groups of Casualty Clearing Stations (CCS) were placed in readiness at three positions called by the troops Mendinghem, Dozinghem and Bandaghem.

Enlisted: Newcastle upon Tyne, Northumberland

Died: 24 May 1915 aged 21 Killed in Action

Memorial: Ypres (Menin Gate) Memorial, Panel 44 and 46, West-Vlaanderen, Belgium

Second Battle Of Ypres: St Julien, April - May 1915, The 2nd Battalion of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers suffered near annihilation during the second battle of Ypres on the 24th of May 1915. On May 24th, 1915, around 2.45am, the Germans launched a poison gas attack. By 9:30 pm, out of a battalion strength of 666 men, all that remained when the battalion 'retired' was one officer and twenty other ranks 'retired' to headquarters. For the record, in just eighteen and three quarter hours, the Dublin Fusiliers had suffered a loss of 645 men who were blown to bits, gassed, or driven insane by the effects of poisonous gas. In the years that followed the ending of the war, many of those who did survive the attack and suffered a gas wound, would die a very slow and painful death from weakened lungs. The German gas attack in the early hours of May 24, was described as being about three miles long and forty feet deep. The Allied troops in the trenches had little hope of escape. The 2nd Battalion of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers were serving at the front that night. The gas bleached the grass, blighted the trees and left a 'broad scar of destruction in its wake'. Outside the city of Ypres on the road to Menin, stands the majestic Menin Gate memorial. Engraved on that memorial are 143 names of Dublin Fusiliers belonging to the 2nd Battalion who died on the 24th of May 1915.

Battle of the Somme, Battle Of Flers-Courcelette, 64 Brigade (attached from 21st Division) formed the 41st Division's attack. They experienced great difficulty in coming up to the front position in the darkness and rain so 15th DLI and 9th KOYLI in front and 10th KOYLI and 1st East Yorks in support advanced some 1300 yards behind the barrage and were also late in starting. They suffered considerably from machine gun fire and shrapnel before passing even 41st Division's forward positions. A few troops got within 100 yards of Gird Trench but the attack could not be pushed home.

Book of Remembrance, Stokesley Parish Church:

Private John Myers ALDERSON NO. 18218 of the 1st Yorkshire Regiment, scholar of the Preston Grammar School, butcher, left England in September 1915, and went to Egypt, thence to the Dardanelles, in October. While restoring wire entanglements at midnight, he was wounded; his friends brought him back to the British lines. He lived only one hour; by his friend Private Farnaby he sent home his last messages; and desired that his Bible be sent to his mother. He died on 20th October 1915. He was 19 years of age. His grave is at Azmac Cemetery, Sulva in Gallipoli. From the Parish Magazine: He died in the service of his country. He was confirmed of 1910; a soldier of Christ as well as of his King and country "Think not that I am come to destroy; I am come not to destroy, but to fulfil"

H.M.S. Viknor was an 5386 ton armed merchant cruiser of the 10th Cruiser Squadron, originally a Blue Star Line vessel called the 'Viking' and built in 1888, she was requisitioned and renamed by the Royal Navy. She was under the Command of Commander E. O. Ballantyne and had a crew compliment of 22 officers and 273 ratings - these were made up of Royal Navy Reserves, 25 of whom came from the Newfoundland Division of the Royal Navy Reserves. On January 13th, 1915 while on active patrol duty in heavy seas off Tory Island she struck a German mine and sank with the loss of all hands. Many of the crew were from South Shields and South Tyneside. In Bonamargie Friary you will find the grave of Private. J. Griffin, PO 7084, RMLI. 25 seamen were of the Newfoundland Division of the Royal Naval Reserve. 24 are commemorated on the Beaumont Hamel Memorial in France. One body was washed ashore and is buried in Colonsay. There are also four unknown graves of seamen from H.M.S. Viknor. In Ballintoy Churchyard you'll find the grave of E.R. Hewett, RN J/27300, 1st Class Boy.

Buried: Lutterworth (St. Mary) Churchyard, Leicestershire

Memorial: Plaque on wall of War Memorial Cloister at Winchester College in section France, Flanders: Reginald Liddon, Major Royal Air Force, started at Winchester 1894

The departure of the Rector [Montague Alderson] has been attended by a very heavy blow which has fallen on the family by the untimely death of his youngest brother, Major Liddon Alderson, of the R.A.F., fourth son of the late Canon and Mrs Alderson], who died in a Military Hospital at Hull on Saturday night [29 June 1918] from a heart failure, following a serious attack of influenza. He was visiting at the Rectory only three weeks ago, and then seemed in his usual health. A wire reached his mother and the Rector on Friday morning as they were preparing to take their leave of the Rectory, and they at once left for Hull. Just about to train as ferry pilot when taken ill.

FUNERAL OF MAJOR ALDERSON: The interment of Major L Alderson took place on Wednesday afternoon (3 July 1918), with full military honours, in the Parish Churchyard. The body was brought from Hull the previous night. The church was closely filled with parishioners, and many waited in the churchyard. The service in the church was choral, the Rev. S. J. Jameson (Cotesbach) took the first part, and the Rector (brother of deceased [Montague 26534]) read the Lesson and also took most of the service at the graveside.

Obituary from the Independent Methodist Magazine 1918 page 90 (with photograph): Richard ALDERSON of Robinson Street Church, Burnley; We received another sad blow when news was received that our young friend, Richard ALDERSON, had died from wounds received in France on March 25th. Only nineteen years old, he was a very bright lad, and took an active part in Band of Hope work and the Scout Troop of our School. We had great expectations of him for the future, as he manifested much interest in the Church. An impressive service, largely attended, was held on Sunday evening, June 16th, when reference was made to our young friend by Mr. Henry HARGREAVES.

123rd Brigade attacked north of the canal with two companies of the 23rd Middlesex, 11th Queen's, 10th Royal West Kents and 20th Durham Light Infantry in support. Despite meeting strong resistance they managed to take the first objective, the Red Line. Progress was slow owing to the state of the ground and the barrage which got ahead of the attacking troops. An attempt was made to take the Green Line, but a line of pillboxes resisted all attempts at capture.

15-25 May 1915, Forming part of French Commander-in-Chief Joseph Joffre's Artois Offensive in the spring of 1915 - his second large-scale infantry assault following the Champagne Offensive in December 1914 - the Battle of Festubert, in the Ypres Salient, was fought by the Allies (British, Canadian and Indian troops) against the Germans from 15-27 May 1915. The Festubert attack was launched by Sir Douglas Haig in response to pressure applied to the British Expeditionary Force (BEF) by Joffre, and was the BEF's second attack during the offensive, following an assault upon Neuve Chapelle four days earlier on 9 May. Preceded by a four day artillery bombardment by over 400 guns firing 100,000 shells, the attack around the village of Festubert was launched at night on 15 May by two divisions of mostly Indian infantry, and made rapid initial progress, despite the failure of the preliminary bombardment to effectively destroy the German Sixth Army front line defences (under Crown Prince Rupprecht). Under attack, the Germans retreated to a line directly in front of the village. A further assault upon these lines, by Canadian troops, was begun on 18 May, but was unsuccessful in the face of German artillery fire. In heavy rain some Allied troops began to prepare trenches to consolidate the small gains made thus far. During that same evening the German front line received a further injection of reserves. Renewed attacks by the Allied forces between 20-24 May resulted in the capture of Festubert village itself, a position held until the ...

Battle of the Somme; Second Battle Of Ypres, On the night of the 14th Sept the 10th moved forward again into Fricourt area and after receiving stores moved forward the following morning to Bernafay Wood. They were ordered to occupy trenches east of Longueval-Fler-Road, the way was by Delville Wood and 8 men were killed by shell fire and a further 9 were killed by shell fire when they reached the objective. The British advance had been stopped with heavy losses at Bulls Road east of Flers and the 10 were ordered to march at midnight to new positions on the left. At 9.45a.m. they were ordered to attack breaking through the Gird defences clearing Gueudecourt of Germans and establishing a new line. The support artillery was poor as they started their advance and as soon as they were in the open they came under heavy machine gun fire losing lots of men for each yard gained. After gaining 1/4 of a mile they had to take shelter in shell holes until 6.45p.m. when another attack was ordered. Our own shell fire was falling all around the 10th forcing them to abandon their shell holes only to cut down by German machine guns. As there were no support troops left withdrawal was ordered to Bulls Road under cover of darkness where they set up defensive positions. On the morning of the 17th they were relieved by the 21st and when they reached Pommiers Redoubt having sustained losses of 381 killed or wounded. They marched back in pouring rain to Ribemont where they boarded French busses travelling to Brevillers for rest and more training.

Walter ALDERSON was born in Darlington, though at the outbreak of War he was living in and enlisted in Northallerton. He was married and his wife's name was Ellen and they had one child. Before the War he worked at the Pattison's Linen Mill and he was a member of the Brompton Chess Club. He joined the territorials immediately after the outbreak of War, and sailed to France with the 4th Yorkshires in April 1915. He was killed, aged 31, while the 4th Yorkshires were occupying the front-line trenches near Kemmel (Trenches G1 to J3). Walter was the only casualty on an otherwise quiet day and the Battalion was relieved on 19th July and moved back to Kemmel Chateau in the rear. In a letter to his family from a Major Charlton it was said he was "shot through the neck and died almost immediately".

Battle of the Somme; Battle Of Ancre Heights, The Division attacked with the 1/8th DLI (151 Brigade) on the right. The men had to pull one another out of the mud before they could start. They almost reached the German lines but were stopped by machine gun fire and gradually fell back during the day. The 1/6th DLI suffered a similar fate except on the left where they linked with 1/9th DLI. The 1/9th went through two lines of German trenches, reached the Butte and established a post on the Bapaume road - some entering the Walencourt line. But these advanced posts were forced back and at 10:00 pm the enemy were still holding the quarry and 500 yards of the German front line. By midnight the DLI had been forced back to their own lines.
